

ROOTS TO GROW: Aboriginal Child, Youth and Family Program

The ROOTS TO GROW program offers Aboriginal Children, Youth and Families; and/or caregivers of Aboriginal Children and Youth the opportunity to receive support as a family or individually, improve health and wellness outcomes, learn about their culture, access community supports and help to achieve personal and family goals. The program provides one-to-one support for children, youth, families and caregivers. There are cultural events, family nights, and workshops to support children and youth to succeed and families to thrive.

Roots to Grow: Aboriginal Child, Youth and Family Program

This program offers Aboriginal parents and their children of all ages with one to one, group, family and caregiver support to strengthen individuals, families and foster placements. Children, youth and families are welcome to join us at the centre for drop-in activities, family nights, workshops, cultural learning opportunities and outings. We are able to sit down with you one to one and discuss any challenges or needs you have and work with you towards resolving them and connecting you to any needed resources. We can also work with you to engage the Ministry or other government services to address issues or access supports needed. The program is client focused, confidential and works to provide culturally sensitive supports and services. Whether you are a child or youth having challenges at home, at school or personally; a family needing help; or a caregiver supporting a child of a relative or foster placement, we can help and provide access to assistance, cultural activities and social opportunities within Richmond.
